Political Science 290 & European Studies 290

Social Policy and Politics: Lessons from Europe

Monday/Wednesday, 2:15-3:35 pm, Center for European Studies, Douglass

Just announced for fall 2013, this popular former SAS Signature course will now be taught seminar-style, with 25 students. Register soon, as spaces are limited!

The course will focus on possible solutions to 21st-century policy challenges faced by the United States, through looking to European solutions. Europe provides an excellent model for the United States, as it is made up of fellow advanced liberal democracies who face many similar challenges. We will examine policy in areas such as healthcare, the environment, education, the recession, etc, and critically evaluate whether European solutions to such public policy problems can apply to the United States. What can we learn from Europe?

Please contact the instructor, Amanda Marziliano (amarziliano@polisci.rutgers.edu) for a preliminary syllabus and/or with any questions.